

ACCO's Privacy & Security Policy

The American Childhood Cancer Organization (ACCO) respects the trust that you place in our organization. Our website contains numerous contact and submission forms for the collection of voluntary information from site users. To protect personal information, ACCO will not share, sell or trade personal or contact information with any other organization or individual, without permission, unless legally compelled to do so; nor will we send information or mailings on behalf of any other organization.

ACCO's website is secured with a GoDaddy.com Web Server Certificate. Transactions are protected with up to a 256-bit Secure Sockets Layer (SSL) encryption. Credit card information is processed securely through GiveDirect's encrypted software platform that GoDaddy.com has verified and other secure payment processors including Amazon Pay and PayPal.

You may request to opt out of receiving communications at any time by emailing: staff@acco.org or by clicking SafeUnsubscribe™ {recipient's email} at the bottom of our emails.

We want you to be confident that your trust in our work is valued and that we respect your rights to privacy.
